

Marybeth Whalen DNP NNP-BC is a Neonatal Nurse Practitioner. As adjunct faculty she is Clinical Coordinator and lead faculty for the Neonatal Nurse Practitioner program here at University of Connecticut, since 2008. She also holds an active clinical position for a tertiary healthcare center in central Massachusetts for the past 20 years and serves as Clinical Instructor for the Division of Pediatrics and Coordinator of the Nurse Practitioner Service for the division of neonatology at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center (UMMC), Worcester, MA. Active professionally Dr. Whalen is an active member of Massachusetts WIC Medical Advisory Board and UMMHC Pediatric Conscious Sedation committee. Additionally, she has contributed various abstracts, publications and has spoken at many conferences with major interests in nutrition and pharmacology. She has been recognized with, Nurse Leader of the Year Award, March of Dimes (2011), Excellence in Nursing Award, Division of Pediatrics at UMMC in 2008 and Professional Advancement for Clinical Excellence Award in 1994.

Dr. Whalen received her Diploma in Nursing from Hahnemann Hospital School of Nursing, followed by a BS from Worcester State College, MS from Northeastern University, and completed her Doctorate in Nursing Practice from Case Western Reserve University.